As the letter expressed no willingness to comply with the viceroy's specific demands, operations will proceed, if possible, more actively in consequence of the ameer's irresolution, so as to acquire as much as possible before he submits. The continuation of General Brown's advance on Jellalabad is certain. The ameer's letter is shown by one of the opening remarks that if the good will really consists in deeds, not words only, it nas not been manifested by the various proposals of the British officials.

A special to the Daily News from Lahore says it is reported that the ameer has fled pecause of a revolution in Cabul. The re port requires confirmation.

In the house of lords this evening, Lord Cranbrook, secretary of state for India, on the moving of a resolution that the expenses of the Afghan war may be defrayed from the revenues of India, said that the estimated Indian surplus was £2,136,000. Therefore, there would be a substantial surplus after paying the war expenses, which were estimated at less than £125,000 for the present financial year. Cranbrook declared that the government assumed full responsibility for Lord Lytton. There was not room for both England and Russia in Afghanistan. answer to England's ultimatum, but a mere evasion. England must be paramount in Afghanistan, which must be a friendly janitor to the doors of India, or England must hold the key herself.

The Viscount of Halifax, moved the amendment censuring the government. Lord Lawrence, formerly governor-general of India, deprecated pushing forward to the frontier under any circumstances. He thought war should be concluded speedily. Nothing should be exacted from the Afghans, and they should be assured of aid against foreign invasion. If England did not pay all costs of the war, there would be indignation and despair in India.

Lord Derby said the government, in only summoning parliament after war was deimmoning parliament after war was de-ared, placed the country, which professed be self-governing, in a peculiar position. He was of the opinion that there not never been any clear wish to avoid the war, and that war was not unconnected with the projects for the rectification of the frontier. Lord Carnarvon declared that the war was irreconcilable with any idea of justice, and the policy in furtherance of which it had been undertaken, was dangerous and delu-sive.

In the house of commons, Mr. Whitts read a resolution disapproving the conduct of the government.

Mr. Stanhope, under secretary for India, defended the government. He said the present government did not desire power or annexation, but was bound to provide for the security of her frontier.

Messrs. Trevelyan and Chamberlain attacked the government.

DON PARDO SHOT.

The Customary Intelligence from South America.

PANAMA, November 30.—Details of the asssination of Don Manuel Pardo are received. It appears that he had driven up to the door of the senate chamber, and was crossing the court-yard. The guard stationed there presented arms, as was customary, and Pardo was in the act of entering the passage leading to the inner court, when the deliberately raised his rifle and shot him in deliberately raised his rifle and shot him in the back. The ball grazed the hand of Senor Ruas, who was with Pardo, and entered below the shoulder blade, passing through the body. Pardo walked a few steps forward, staggered and fell. The assassin was seized by Dr. Adam Melgar, who had followed Pardo from the carriage, but "managed to escape, the guard making no effort to detain him. A sergeant of the corps of gen d'arme shortly afterwards seized him and brought him back, and he was placed in a small room in the inner cou tof the senate. Pardo was not removed from where he fell, and shortly after expired in the presence of his family. He commended them to congress, and with his last words forgave the murderer. President Prado, on being informed of the murder drove immediately to the spot and expressed indignation, openly ordering the arrest of the guard at once. The assassin is of Indian origin and had been seven years in the regiment and had always bore a good character. It is said he has confessed the assassination and that Don Manuel Pardo had formed a part of the conspiracy in which almost all the sergeants of "Pichincha" battalion, and it is even added, that some officers are implicated. A Girl of Eleven Married to a Boy of Eighteen. Rochester (N. Y.) Democrat. Yesterday Chief-of-police McLean receive d an anonymous postal card, the message

Anonymous communications are generally given as little attention by Chief Mc-Lean as they are by newspapers. But this seemeed to be one the purport of which, if true, was important, and warranted investigation. Accordingly Detective Rogers was detailed to look up the facts in the case, when he found that the message on the card was at least founded on fact. The detective learned that such a marriage had taken place on the 18th of the present month, and that although the girl, Delia Gascoign, was less than 12 years of age, her mother had not only consented to, but urged the marriage, because, as she said, she was afraid her daughter would "turn out bad." The bridegroom's name is Joseph Hans, and he is 18 years of age. The following card from the officiating clergyman, Rev. Edward Bristol, throws light upon the measures Mrs. Gascoign adopted to enforce the marriage of her little daughter. As the clergyman can produce abundant evidence of the truth of his statements, they will prove eminently satisfactory as between clergyman can produce abundant evidence of the truth of his statements, they will prove eminently satisfactory as between himself and the people:

To the editor of the Democrat and Chronice—Sir. Allow me, in reply to statements in last evening's paper, to state the facts regarding a marriage I was reported to have performed.

A very respectable looking woman called on me on November 18th, and stated that she called to see if I would, in the evening, marry her daughter; that the young man to whom she was engaged was working by the day, and too busy to come, so she called at his request. I asked her daughter's age, and she replied: "Fourteen next month." I protested against a girl so young being married, and her reply was that she, herself, was going to move from the city, and did not want to leave her here alone. On further questioning, she said, emphatically: "I want her married—she ought to be." In reply to my questions, as to the friends of the young man consenting, she said: "They are willing. His own sister and my own will stand with them."

All of the above parties were present at the marriage, which was performed in the presence of others; also, before all of whom the girl made the same statement, in regard to her age, that had been previously made by her mother.

Let me add that before the marriage I stated the facts to one of the oldest pastors in the city, who advised me that, if in my place, he should, under the circumstadces, perform the cereurony without the least hesitation.

Rochester, November 27. Cases on Blackwell's Island—The Three Lepers at the Charity Hospital—A Man Whose Fingers and Toes are

New York Times.

Just now there are three cases of leprosy at the Charity hospital at Blackwell's island, which have proved of such curious interest to the medical profession that the superintending physician is troubled with more scientific visitors than he cares to see. One of them, a lad of 19, a native of Santiago de Cuba, expects to set out for home in a day or two, or in the first sailing vessel that will accept a leprous passenger, but as this is by no means the most advanced case, he will scarcely be missed. In 1870 Emillo Trenal, then a boy 12 years of age, came to this city from a town in Cuba where no case of leprosy has been recorded. He was here five years before the disease showed itself in the leprous spots, with local anæsthesia, which are the principal diagnostic indicia. For two years and four months he struggled against conviction, and with some vain hope that the diagnosis was a mistaken one until the boys—little barbarians—began to hoot him on the street. Eight months ago he applied for admission to the hospital, and will remain there until he can be sent home. As the disease, when pitted against youth and a strong constitution, is frequently 20 years in completing its work, a more dreary and suicide-inducing outlook can scarcely be imagined than that of a man stricken leprous in his youth, and doomed to the long isolation of the plague.

Abraham Brown, forty-five years of age, native of New York city, has been in hospital a shorter period, but his case is of more unique interest. The victim was stricken only last April, and admitted to the hospital in June. The progress of the malady has been virulent and rapid, commencing as usual with thickening of the skin in spots, with lose of local sensibility. Accompanying this came a strange debility and lassitude, with occasional exaltation of spirits. The disease has now attacked the morning I noticed among the passengers who had joined us there a lady who has, for some years past, been known here at Washington as "the queen of the lobby." Age adds to her personal charms, and I could but notice her as she sat gracefully yet proud as a throned sovereign, glancing over the newspapers with her keen gray eyes and a purpose marked in each line of her handsome face. Or course, she was exquisitely attired, for the soldier of fortune, of either sex, must wear a gay untarnished uniform, alrhough the pockets may be empty. At Baltimore, every feature softened as a western congressman came into the car, and she gave him a joyous greeting. Before we had left the monumental city, the rural representative, fresh from his Lares and Penate, had marched into the little parlor, and when at the Relay house the fair spider opened her lunch abasket, perfuming the car with the odor of old Bourbon, it was evident that the Honorable Jefferson Caucusman would vote for the Oregon and Alaska steamship sudsidy, the South Arizons Elevated railroad grant and the other jobs which have retained "the queen." The session is to be short and there is no time to be lost. Here was an early worm who was accidentally caught by a pretty bird before he could reach the metropolis.

Telegraph Needed Badly.

Sunday night last about half past six o'clock an alarm of fire was sounded in the fourth ward, near the corporation limits. The cry was taken up by persons on the streets, and about a half hour after the alarm was given by the ringing of the firebell at No. I engine house. The department was soon out for duty, and responded promptly at the point where the cry was first heard. Upon the arrival of the firemen there, it was ascertained that the alarm was caused by the A False Alarm of Fire-A Fire Alarm

Some of the fingers and toes have already dropped off, while the rest ulcerons and loathesome, hang loosely by their rotting and disfigured joints. The brain remains unaffected, and the victim converses with intelligence. According to his own story, which has been verified in its main particulars, Mr. Brown, who is a gas engineer by profession, emigrated thirteen years ago to Santiago de Cuba, where he was employed in the gas-works for three years. He returned to this city ten years ago without a vestige of the disease that has since reduced him to a living skeleton. It was then 1868. He had lived here ten years, almost, when, last spring, the primary symptoms made their app arance. He adoption of the constitution of 1798, White's statistics and historical collections, Sherwood's Gazetteer, a few religious works, confined mostly to denominational history, the records and collections of the Historical society at Savannah, the Georgia manuals, these of the mystery is that ten years of fair health should elapse between the departure from Santiago de Cuba and the first manifestations of the malady. Brown attributes his misfortune to exposure to the heat of the sun and the breathing of air loaded with foul vapors while pursuing his profession in the West Indies.

The third case is that of an intelligent German, aged 71, who served in the United States army in Texas years ago, and afterward followed the business of ahorse-trader on the Mexican border. Cases of the disease are not unfrequent at Brownsville, and the breath of the save and the heads distributed of the sun and the save are not unfrequent at Brownsville, and the lease is mile and the state, and the lease are not unfrequent at Brownsville, and the lease is miles and the state, and the lease of the state, and the lease in the state, and this subject should arrest the attention of every Georgian. states army in Texas years ago, and afterward followed the business of a horse-trader on the Mexican border. Cases of the disease are not unfrequent at Brownsville, Texas, and the border districts of Mexico. In that immediate vicinity they are so common as to attract little attention from the indifferent and apathetic Mexicans. Karl Henkle first detected symtoms of the disease in the spring of 1876, while employed in this city. The case is not one of extreme virulence, although, of course, hopeless in the present condition of medical science. Henkle is so little disfigured and emaciated that one might pass him on the street without suspicion, but the malady gnaws deep, and is making steady progress.

A superior scientific interest, aside from mere phases of the disease, inheres in the second case described, as the victim denies strenuously having ever seen a leper. "No great importance is given to his own explanation the fact haine families that leaves in great importance is given to his own explana-tion, the fact being familiar that leprosy is not uncommon in Sweden and Norway, and among the Laps and Finns, as well as in Italy, Spain and the warm Mediterranean shores, from the Dardanelles to Gibraltar. Her beauty is of the style that endures. It is not made for youth only, but for a long lifetime. In receiving, the marquis is hardly equal to his predecessor, the Earl of Dufferin. He had not his kind and easy smile, nor yet his familiar style and grace, but he evidently meant to do the popular thing and as evidently succeeded. The princess certainly did, for she smiled most amiably on every one and took the hearts of the people by storm.

ATLANIA, December 3, 1878.—Doctor J. S. Holliday: Sir—I have been credibly informed that you said to Mr. Edward Leach, of Fayette county, an ex-member of the legislature, and a gentleman who does not know me personally, that "Richardson has on his ticket a man of the name of Wallace who is an old broken down whisky-drinker," or words to that effect, thereby uttering a slanderous and hurtful reflection on my character and standing as a respectable citizen.

As I claim to be your peer by hirth, edu-cation, associations and achievements, I hereby demand an unconditional retraction of these slanderous words in such form as will prevent their repetition.

Respectfully,

ALEX M. WALLACE.

Respectfully, demondant of their papers of the nation were taught how to vote the democratic ticket, in spite of such infidely as Whitelaw Reid, Georgia's history deserved their papers of the part of a Macaulay, and every school boy in Georgia should possess a full and complete history of his native state.

The articles by Hon. H. R. Casey about columbia county should cause similar articles in every c unty in the state, and the plan you suggest would preserve these sketches for the historian.

Why defer the matter? Is not the history of Georgia sufficiently important to warrant the state government in taking steps for the collection of the material, and in employing some competent writer to edit the work? The services of Hon. C. C. Jones, Hon. Samuel Barnett, or other competent writers might be secured.

The writer, several years ago, prepard a historical sketch of Troup county, including a list of the 500 soldiers lost in the late war, with many biographical notices, and while investigating the subject changes the history of Georgia since 1798, or 1732, if you please, must and shall be written by some Thucidydes, or Gibbon, Jones, Barnett or Harris, Joe), if the newspapers so decree.

Senator Lamar is said to be preparing a great speech on the southern question, in which he will answer the charges against his section, and show how the south may be justified in all that has been done to overthrow republican rule. He is the best man in the southern wing of his party for the work, for he is, after all is said against him, the ablest and the most honest of southern statesmen. It will be curious to see how he will dispose of the tissue ballots. If he touches them at all, he will be the first democrat to do it, for all the other southern defenders are unanimously silent about them. They talk largely enough about the ignorance and corruption of negro supremacy, and about the comparatively innocence of bloodless intimidation, but they have never heard about the use of tissue ballots, or of the gifted illustrator of the boundlessness of universal suffrage, who was able to vote 2,500 times in one brief day. Mr. Lamar will have a chance to make a truly great effort if he grapples with that branch of the subject.

So far as we are able to judge from its action up to date, the present general assembly compares favorably with similar deliberative bodies which have met in the past. The senate is exceedingly able and there are many bright and eloquent spirit sin the house who are destined to make their mark in the future political history of the commonwealth. They have exhibited becoming industry also, and when we reflect that their work, as it were, had to be performed ab initio and de novo, very creditable progress has been made. All of the local legislation, of course; goes over to the adjourned session. But several very important measures have been disposed of. The interval between the adjournment and reassembling in July, we trust will be profitably employed in digesting the immense amount of work that remains to be done, and assertaining the true animus of their constituents upon the leading questions upon which they must ake action thereafter. Can it be that Tilden has already begun to "work up" the solid south for 1880? There are a good many suspicious outgivings which make it look as if he had. Leading southern statesmen like Hill and Gordon are openly for him, and in every southern state there are influential politicians who say they are in favor of the best man in 1880, and who immediately add that they don't believe any of the charges against Tilden. The south sees that success without New York is limposable, and if Tilden can convince them that if he can't carry New York no other democrat can, he is sure of their solid support. It looks now as if he were slowly distilling a belief of that sort into the southern mind. He did it in 1876, and he therefore knows how to go to work to doit again.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY. TWENTY-EIGHTH DAY'S PROCEED

MONDAY, Dece met at 10 o'clock, the presi ent in the chair. Prayer was offered by Rev. George Mc-Cauley.

The roll was called and the journal of Saturday read, when Mr. Cabaniss gave notice that he should move to reconsider so much of the action of the senate as relates to a res-tion of the senate in regard to the house resolution as stated above. The senate had olution as stated above. The senate had agreed to the resolution to appoint a joint committee to make the investigation. Mr. Cabaniss stated that there were two reasons why there should be a reconsideration. One was to perfect the bill, as it was full of errors. Another reason for a reconsideration, there was too much power given to the committee. The resolution gave too much time, or rather too unlimited a time to make this investigation, and would therefore involve too much expense. He had given the resolution to show that it bristled with imperfections, and to carry it out would incur the expenditure of too bristled with imperfections, and to carry it out would incur the expenditure of too much money. If there had been frands, no man was more desirous to unearth them, yet in his judgment all the facts could be arrived at in less time, and at less cost than under the resolution. Mr. Cabaniss gave other reasons for making his motion.

Mr. Russell hoped that the motion to reconsider would not prevail. Perhaps there were grammatical errors, yet not of sufficient moment to make the resolution objectionable. If the matter was reconsidered it would go to the house, and no action would be taken before an adjournment. It was strange that the comptroller-general was strange that the comptroller-general should leave his office and come into the senate chamber and request senators to have the resolution reconsidered. he resolution reconsidered.

Mr. Cabiniss stated that the comptroller

Mr. Cabiniss stated that the comptroller had never spoken to him about it.
Mr. Russell continuing his remarks, stated that he had no allusion to the senator from the 22d. He had letters in his possession from various localities in Georgia asking why an investigation is not made. He could see that an effort was being made He could see that an effort was being made to choke off an investigation. It was strange that twenty thousand lots had been sold and not one dollar from them had gone into the treasury. This money remains in the hands of the men who are not entitled to it. As to the resolutions being too ample, he could not think so. No danger from an honest committee. He did not think a committee of senators under oath would depart from of senators under oath would depart from their duty.

Mr. Preston replied to Mr. Russell. He favored the motion to reconsider, and was not for choking down an investigation. He did not wish to screen the comptroller. He had been to the comptroller's office for information, and he got it, nor did the comptroller solicit him to reconsider. Mr. Preston passed a high encomium on the comptroller as a man and as an officer of the state. There was no opposition to an in-comproner as a man and as an oncer of the state. There was no opposition to an investigation, nor was there any disposition to choke it down. He thought the resolution was too broad, and to carry it out would involve too much expense. He, and those who were with him, thought that an investigation could be done in less time and state. who were with him, thought that an investigation could be done in less time and at less expense. Under the resolution, it would be impossible to make an investigation in the time required. He had said the resolution was too broad; it would require sheriffs and others to come to Atlanta, involving time and expense, when it could be done cheaper. His resolution gave too much scope to the committee. He thought the resolution was too compressions.

cheaper. His resolution gave too much scope to the committee. He thought the resolution was too comprehensive and impractical. He favored an investigation, but at less expense. He was opposed to the now prevalent spirit of distrusting our officers—he was not one of the outs who was ready to throw mode on the house, which showed a strong disposition to pass the bill just as it had been amended by the committee on finance.

An amendment to the oath required of each person in giving in taxable property was adopted. It required each person to swear that in addition to his other property he also gives in all the cash money he has. After all the amendments and sections had been considered, the bill was passed almost exactly as reported by the committee.
